Theme of the Conference

India, a transition economy, has undergone several structural reforms to develop market based institutions. Economic liberalization, brought about by market forces at play has led to the removal of trade barriers, encouraged privatization, restructured businesses. All these financial and economic reforms have led to macroeconomic stabilization and mobilized private capital.

The Indian financial system is undergoing a paradigm shift. With an increased focus on transparency and disclosure requirements, the regulatory bodies like the Reserve Bank of India, Institute of Chartered Accountants of India, Institute of Company Secretaries of India, NFRA, SEBI need to play a more proactive role in boosting confidence in the capital market. The banking system is already staring at the huge burden of non-performing assets and the challenge in meeting the capital requirements under the Basel norms. On the other hand, FII flow in the Indian market through Participatory Notes, Portfolio investments have become very volatile and uncertain. Under these circumstances, it is pertinent that researchers come together and try to deliberate on the new solutions to face the problems at hand.

This conference aims at bringing scholarly works in these areas wherein the participants will get a platform to share their existing work and collaborate with others for undertaking research. The conference invites papers, both theoretical and empirical, in areas which include, but are not limited to:

- Financial theory
- Central banks and monetary policy
- Banks and banking services
- Regulation and supervision in financial sector
- Financial markets
- Non-banking financial institutions
- Risk management
- Financial econometrics
- Public finance
- Corporate finance and financial management
- Financial and monetary integration
- Behavioral economics/finance
- Behavior of crude oil/metals prices

The themes are indicative and not exhaustive within the areas of Applied Finance, Banking, and Economics.
